

PROFESSIONAL ASSOCIATIONS

Why Join a Professional Organization?

Joining a professional organization is an invaluable component to your career and professional development. They will serve as a resource for you now as a college student and for the rest of your career. There are several reasons you should explore various associations and join one (or a few) while you are still in school.

- Networking: Professional organizations generally meet on a regular basis and host conferences/workshops. These are great opportunities to meet potential employers and start building your professional network. Where else can you go where the room is filled with professionals working in your field of interest?
- Discounted Dues: Yes, there is a fee associated with joining a professional organization. However, as a student the fee is generally discounted by a large amount. Joining now as a student will save you money in the long run.
- Scholarships: Many professional organizations offer scholarships for student members. Some scholarships may award you the opportunity to attend conferences/workshops, others may pay your annual dues.
- Job Opportunities: Most professional organizations have job postings that only members can access.
- Professional Development: As you move further into your field of interest it will be important to keep up with the latest trends/research. Professional organizations give you the opportunity to stay current in your field.
