

Staff Policy: Personal Appearance

Because each employee acts as a representative of the University when interacting with students, other employees, or other members of or visitors to the UP community, the University expects employees to be dressed and groomed appropriately for their positions. As such, employees are expected to maintain appropriate personal dress and hygiene standards. While the University has no official dress code, employees are expected to exercise good judgment regarding matters of personal hygiene and appropriate attire. If a supervisor determines that an employee is not meeting departmental expectations, he or she will bring the matter to the employee's attention.
