

What happens if I report an incident to the University?

Report made

Harassment, misconduct, or violence is reported to a university employee, or directly to Title IX.

Report sent to Title IX Coordinator

Disclosures made to non-confidential UP employees must be shared with the Title IX Coordinator (see reverse for a list of confidential resources).

Meeting to discuss options and resources

Student is invited to meet with Title IX Coordinator to learn about resources, support, and resolution options

Student chooses how to proceed*

Student may choose to receive support services, and/or may choose to file a formal complaint.

File complaint, if student chooses*

Informal resolution -

For less serious conduct, this may involve support and accommodations for the reporting party, and/or action by the responding party.

Formal resolution -

For more serious conduct, this involves an investigation and the student conduct process.

*A formal complaint is required in some situations

While the student's wishes will be taken into account as much as possible, the Title IX Coordinator may sign a formal complaint for allegations of violence, threats, use of weapons, and serial predation, or similar factors.

Supportive measures that are available:

- Housing accommodations
- Academic accommodations
- Referrals to counseling and/or medical services
- No contact orders
